

What is claimed is :

1. A keeping case comprising a partition plate, to divide an inner space of an upper-opening case main body, attached to the case main body as to slide along a pair of parallel sides of an upper opening brim of the case main body, and having hitching portions, to prevent the partition plate from being drawn out of the case main body, detachably hitched on the pair of sides of the case main body.

2. The keeping case as set forth in claim 1, wherein the hitching portion has an elastically-deformable holding piece portion and a claw portion protruding from the holding piece portion.

3. The keeping case as set forth in claim 1 or claim 2, wherein the partition plate has a belt piece portion, facing an inner face of the case main body, to prevent the partition plate from falling and inclining on each of side edges of the partition plate.

4. A partition plate to divide an inner space of an upper-opening case main body of a keeping case provided with the case main body and a lid to open and close the case, having hitching portions, to prevent the partition plate from being drawn out of the case main body, detachably hitched on the pair of sides of an upper-opening portion of the case main body.

5. The partition plate as set forth in claim 4, wherein the hitching portion has an elastically-deformable holding piece portion and a claw portion protruding from the holding piece portion.

6. The partition plate as set forth in claim 4 or claim 5, wherein the partition plate has a belt piece portion, facing an inner face of the case main body, to prevent the partition plate from falling and inclining on each of side edges of the partition plate as to be at right angles with each of the side edges.